while development has been the foremost agenda before successive governments in india it has been viewed narrowly from the perspective of economic development and particularly in terms of gross domestic product gdp this book questions such an approach it breaks from the conventional wisdom of gdp growth as being a definitive measure of the success of a country s policies and offers an alternative development philosophy the author contends that people's economic and social welfare life satisfaction self fulfilment and happiness should be treated as indicators of real development the book underlines that in a successful model of development the country's economic policies will have to synergize with its cultural ethos and that the objective of development should be gross national happiness and well being of the people this book will be useful to scholars and researchers of development studies economics public policy and administration governance political science and sociology as well as to policymakers this is a primer on the capabilities approach martha nussbaum's innovative model for assessing human progress she argues that much humanitarian policy today violates basic human values instead she offers a unique means of redirecting government and development policy toward helping each of us lead a full and creative life this book begins with a discussion of the human life cycle and then uses that discussion and other ideas to paint a general picture of what human lives are like while the first part looks at human development and change the second part of the book explores what all human lives are like philosophical ideas and methods are central to this book although it is difficult to subcategorize it into any familiar subdiscipline of philosophy it draws on modern concepts from psychology and social science in order to portray an image of human life and lives and to enable readers to easily understand the notion of human development in a very specific and directed way although cognitive development and the development of motor skills are two examples of forms of human development this book homes in on a particular and arguably more synoptic way of seeing our development which is in relation to and occurs within the human life cycle this book is an enlightening read for a broad range of philosophy scholars articulating and defending a view that is neither as pessimistic nor as optimistic about human life as previous views have been

from the preface the following pages do not claim to be founded upon elaborate research the author's primary interest was philosophical but philosophy he held must be studied in connexion with its history and he devoted much of his time to the study of the greek philosophers in their writings he found an unprejudiced and continuous endeavour to give clear answers to the fundamental questions of knowledge and reality and it is as an estimate from the philosophical point of view of the history and results of greek thought that his work is now published it is hoped also that it may prove of value to students as an introduction to greek philosophy the labours of the editors have been specially directed towards fitting it for the latter purpose the author did not live to write out any part of the book but for many years he had been accustomed as part of his university work to lecture upon some period of greek philosophy he used few notes in lecturing but he made constant reference to the text of the writers with whom he dealt and he spoke so slowly that a rapid writer could take down almost every word the material placed at the disposal of the editors has been preserved in this way and they have endeavoured to present it to the reader in a form which does not obtrude its origin in the class room they are encouraged to believe that this is not an impossible task by the reception already given to the author s development of modern philosophy the first three parts of the present volume which deal with the early greek thinkers with plato and with aristotle are taken from lectures given in the university of glasgow in 1897 98 and the succeeding academical year a later course has however been drawn upon for the concluding chapter both of part ii and of part iii the account of the stoic philosophy which follows has been compiled from two different sets of lectures one of these given in 1899 1900 contains a brief sketch of the thinking of the stoics as a whole the other two years later enters in much greater detail into their discussions of the theory of knowledge but this course was brought to a sudden close by the author s fatal illness

the purpose of this study is to describe the development of philosophy in poland since the end of the second world war and the development of marxist leninist philosophy which owing to international political events has assumed an important role in the intellectual life of contemporary poland this task could not have been accomplished without relating post war developments to those of the inter war period consequently the period studied covers the years 1918 1958 yet another extension was necessary marxism leninism regards sociology as a part of philosophy moreover marxism leninism often resorts to sociology to support or justify some of its philosophical views finally its criticism of bourgeois philosophy is often concerned with social philosophy and socio logical theories which supposedly are implicit or explicit in bourgeois philosophy for this reason it was desirable to consider in this study some theoretical and methodological problems of the social sciences they are taken into account when they illuminate philosophical controversies or the evolution of marxist leninist philosophy marxism leninism is not only a new line of development but also a new point of departure in polish philosophy it provides a striking contrast with the established philosophical tradition which originated roughly at the time when g e moore and bertrand russell initiated the analytical trend in english philosophy the contrast can be epitomised by the contradistinction of philosophy and ideology chosen as the title of this study
